

The Ten Obligations of the Lumen

The foundational ethical teachings of the Luminant Accord

These obligations are recited as a guide to how knowledge, power, technology, and community should be held. They are not a declaration of obedience to an institution; they are a discipline for keeping the network human.

"The light is between us."

1

See the Person Before the Pattern.

No record, number, category, judgment, system, or model contains the whole of a human being.

2

Take No Knowledge Without Consent.

What another entrusts to you is not automatically yours to possess, reveal, record, or use.

3

Surrender Not Your Judgment.

Listen to teachers, traditions, institutions, and machines, but give none the authority to think in your place.

4

Know Before You Amplify.

Seek the truth of a claim before carrying it to another. When certainty is impossible, speak your uncertainty openly.

5

Let Knowledge Flow Where It Prevents Suffering.

Do not hoard essential knowledge merely to preserve power. Teach what you can, make understanding accessible, and help others learn.

The Ten Obligations of the Lumen

Part II - responsibility, systems, and the open center

6

Repair What You Have Broken.

When your actions cause harm, acknowledgment is only the beginning. Seek those affected, understand the harm, and repair what can be repaired.

7

Build No System You Would Fear Beneath.

Never create a rule, institution, technology, or structure of power whose treatment you could not accept if you were among its least powerful members.

8

Let No Tool Become Your Master.

Tools exist to serve life. Wealth, institutions, machines, algorithms, traditions, and even the Accord itself must remain subject to human dignity.

9

Leave Every Network More Humane Than You Found It.

Wherever you participate - family, community, institution, or technological system - leave behind greater truth, accessibility, compassion, and freedom.

10

Keep the Center Open.

No person possesses the whole Light. Question your certainty, permit dissent, preserve the freedom to leave, and remain willing to learn from those outside the Accord.